Spain has invested in policy areas impacting early childhood development (ECD). In 2021, under the General State Budget, a budget line has been earmarked for early childhood education and care (ECEC). As part of its pre-government agreement, the current government coalition pledged to “protect public services, especially education” and promote nursery schools from birth to three-years-old throughout its term in office. In addition, in June 2020, a Minimum Living Income (461,5 euros per month as a basic amount, which can be increased depending on the needs of the applicant) was introduced and now provides support, especially to the most vulnerable children and their families.

Earlier in 2021, in collaboration with more than 75 associations and private companies, the High Commissioner on Child Poverty launched the National Alliance for Zero Child Poverty, which encourages the participation and creation of alliances between all social actors to work towards a common vision: a Spain where all children and adolescents have the same opportunities for the future regardless of the conditions they were born into. In order to address the multiple dimensions of child poverty – education, nutrition, care, housing, and the digital divide – the Alliance invites actors to work together through effective strategies that take into account the needs of vulnerable children.

While promising steps have been made recently, access to basic ECD services in Education, Health, Nutrition, and/or Social and Child Protection for all children under six is not yet guaranteed. There is a lack of sufficient data across ECD policy areas, indicating that investment in ECD lacks a holistic approach. Significant challenges exist in Spain, including the participation of children under three years of age in ECEC settings, of parenting support, especially for families in vulnerable situations, and the promotion of work-life balance. In addition, the administration of the education sector in Spain is decentralised, resulting in great differences in the opportunities and costs for ECEC services between regions, and in persistent, large regional disparities in key educational and social indicators.

CHILD POVERTY

In Spain, there is a lack of data on child poverty and social exclusion. Data available over the last several years indicate that there has been an increase in both the percentage of children at risk of poverty and social exclusion and the percentage of children suffering from severe material deprivation.

MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH

In Spain, healthcare is guaranteed for all children from birth to six years. Additionally, there is 100% coverage for both antenatal care and access to a postnatal health check for newborns and mothers. Thus, the percentage of infants with low birth weight was 7.49 in 2019, whereas the percentage of children receiving vaccinations is high. Finally, in 2017, most children under four lived in households with very good or good general health.

CHILD SAFETY AND SECURITY

In the area of child protection, two new laws approved in 2015 reformed the legal framework governing the system of protection for children and adolescents. Although all children are registered at birth, there is insufficient data on other child safety and security indicators.
In Spain, the education sector is managed by regions. There is no universal access to ECEC for children under three years of age, whereas for children between three and six years old, there is access, but it is not compulsory. In the 2020-21 school year, 464,479 children up to three years of age were enrolled in authorised ECEC centres. Although the annual evolution shows an increase of the number of children under three enrolled (+0.4% in 2017, +0.4% in 2018 and +0.3 in 2019) the pandemic has shown a significant decrease of enrolled children (-0.9%) in the current school year.

In terms of staff qualification levels, there is a decentralized policy. Per region, different percentages of staff have a minimum of a Bachelor’s level qualification for the entire ECEC birth to six age group, as well as the birth to three age group. Policies regarding the adult-to-child ratio and group size and the facilitation of access to ECEC for children from vulnerable families are also decentralised. This report provides an overview of the available policies per region.

ECEC settings in Spain have doubled in recent years exceeding the EU average, but they are not equally accessible to all children. A lack of public spaces, high prices, insufficient aid and public support systems, complex bureaucratic processes, and a lack of inclusive or accessible schedules and models are barriers that prevent most disadvantaged children from accessing ECEC services. The great challenge that Spain has now is to expand equitable access and investment. It is not only a matter of rights, but also the most profitable and effective way to reduce educational and social inequalities.
PARENTING AND FAMILY SUPPORT

In Spain, family support mechanisms are available but limited. Currently, they support the most vulnerable, as they are provided to the families below the severe poverty threshold, thus leaving out the families living in moderate poverty.

CROSS-SECTORAL COORDINATION

In Spain, there is no explicitly stated multi-sectoral ECD national strategy (or any other policy document) nor is there a coordinating body overseeing the ECD policies, funding, and spending in a cross-sectoral manner at the country level. However, a good example of a coordinating body at the municipality level is provided by the Hospitalet de Llobregat, a municipality in the Autonomous Community of Catalonia. For several years now, different professional childcare services for children under six years of age, such as the Municipal Social Services Centre, the Basic Health Area, public kindergartens, public nurseries and primary schools, among others, have been working together to support families in their roles of supporting children’s development. The principles are underpinned by the framework of the Council of Europe’s recommendation (EU Recommendation 2006/19) on positive parenting and the principles of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (UN, 1989). This coordination aims to promote communication, the proximity of services and the ability to tend to the diverse and changing needs of the population. This network organises workshops, produces reports and documentation on practices, and organises discussions with authorities and education professionals to improve services for children up to six years of age.
